(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON. D. C., Feb. 15.—One of the most remarkable examples of the ill luck attending the use of the number thirteen is set out in a report to the Navy Department from an officer on the United States receiving ship Franklin, at Norfolk, It is as follows:

The following interesting example of the unlucky thirteen is respectfully submitted. The items are compiled from the records of the office and Stark's statements:

the records of the office and Stark's statements:

"C. Stark, C. P. U. S. N., enlisted May 13th; he arrived on the United States receiving ship Franklin as one of a draft of thirteen; he was court-martialed on the 18th of the month, and spent thirteen days in cell No. 13 of the brig.

"He was dishonorably discharged, with a balance overpaid of $13.13, and began his new life as a civilian February 13th.

"Another peculiar incident attached to this report was the fact that it was also mailed on the 13th of the month."

This dispatch was received in The Times. Dispatch at 2:13 A. M., and was taken by the month.
